BRITISH HONDURAS: First settled in the 18th century by a Scotchman, it became a British possession in 1836. The country is 8,598 sq. miles in area; population of entire country is under 90,000 with nearly half living in Belize, the capital. The coast faces the Caribbean Sea and borders on Guatemala and Mexico; it is low, swampy, and covered with forests. The climate is sub-tropical and damp. Chief exports are lumber, chicle, sugar, and coconuts. Fishing and hunting prospects are excellent with good accommodations available at the Fort George Hotel. During the DX-pedition about 4,500 contacts were made in 92 different countries.
